The ten day, ten hour a day, non-stop run of the Maxwell car in and around Philadelphia has ended. Harry Walls, the manager of the Philadelphia branch of the United States Motor Company, devised the run, and it wasn't as easy a thing as it looked. The car ran 150 miles a day, but one day wasn't able to get back to Philadelphia for the morning stari. The reason was that a terrific snowstorm was encountered. The machine was run the full 150 miles and then put up for the night at a town some distance from Philadelphia. It ran the full 150 miles every day, although when a thaw came it took some frouble on a couple of occasions to get the machine over the very muddy roads. The machine made a perfect road score.

of strict honesty in selling cars and how very often a man is telling the truth when appearances are all against him W.S. Jewell, vice-president of the new Motors Engineering and Sales Company, tells a story to illustrate. It is this:

A young negro down South came up to a white man who lived in the place and offered to sell him a turkey he carried under his arm. The white man said he'd take the turkey if it were a domestic bird, not a wild one. The white man said he'd take the turkey if it were a domestic bird, not a wild one. The white man met the negro in the street, and on the strength of the black man, and on the strength of the statement he made the sale.

Next day the white man met the negro in the street, and grabbing hold of him said. Here, you, didn't you tell me that bird wasn't a wild turkey. When I carved it I found it filled with shot. What do you mean by lying to me?

Dat ain't no lie, boss,' returned the black man. Dem shot you found was years for me and as soon as the yacht is in the water the work of fitting the interior will be proceeded with. Dis will be the last big yacht Lawley will build at the South Boston yard. A site has been purchased at Yearneys, where the shops will be set up. Of strict honesty in selling cars and how
